

Mr J.H. Woolley — Mrs E.I. Sangster

THE parish church of St Peter and St Paul, Gosberton, was filled with relatives and friends for the marriage of well known artist Mrs Edna Irene Sangster, widow of a former vicar of Gosberton, the Rev A.J. Sangster, to Mr James Henry Woolley, widower, of Quadring Road, Gosberton. The ceremony took place on the bride's birthday, the same date that her late parents had married.

Officiating at the ceremony were Canon Tom Williamson, vicar of Gosberton group of churches, the Rural Dean the Rev Ken Almond, and former a vicar of Pinchbeck, Canon Ron Wilson. Organist was Mrs Pauline Robinson.

Given in marriage by Col David Laidlaw, the bride chose a pretty floral dress and carried a bouquet of stephanotas, lilies, roses and orchids.

She was attended by her great niece, Miss Kate Norman, and the bridegroom's granddaughters, Miss Carrie May, and the Misses Jennifer, Catherine and Susan Robinson. Kate and Carrie wore Laura Ashley dresses in dusky pink mole skin, with natural straw hats and Jennifer, Catherine and Susan wore liberty smocked dresses in floral print. The two older bridesmaids had bouquets to match the brides while the younger ones carried posies.

Best man was Mr Leslie Beels.
The choir was in attendance.

A reception was held at Springfields. The bride is very well known in the area as an artist and the bridegroom is a retired headmaster of a senior boys approved school.
